

Internship Opportunities — Child Health Policy Program

Thank you for your interest in interning with the Child Health Policy Program. Internships are open to Rice University undergraduate and graduate students. We are seeking hard-working, motivated students who are passionate about furthering their understanding of the interactions between social structure, neighborhoods, families, and children.

Students should be interested in community outreach and the practical implications of research on public policy decisions. Internship candidates must have a strong work ethic and be willing to broaden their knowledge about research, survey design, and quantitative methods.

Students should have experience using Microsoft Excel and knowledge of statistical packages such as Stata, R, SPSS, or SAS.

Interns will be paid and are expected to work 10 hours per week in support of the research mission of the Child Health Policy Program.

Responsibilities include, but are not limited to the following:

1. Input data for existing projects.
2. Organize datasets for analysis.
3. Develop presentations to communicate original research to community and university stakeholders.
4. Assist with developing statistical models on primary and secondary data.
5. Assist with writing publications.
6. Design infographics for community stakeholders.
7. Help conceptualize new projects for future research.

Please complete the following application to be considered for an internship.
Your responses to the essay questions should not exceed 500 words.

We also ask for you to submit a writing sample that is representative of your academic work.
This sample may be from a seminar, conference, or peer reviewed paper. Single authored papers are preferred.

Submit your completed application form and writing sample by email to ck39@rice.edu.

Internship Application — Child Health Policy Program

Please complete to the best of your ability; for questions or concerns, contact ck39@rice.edu.

Name _____

Email _____

Phone _____

Alt. Email _____

I am a current Rice University student.

Proj. Graduation Date _____

Please select your class level:

- Freshman Junior Grad Student
 Sophomore Senior

Which semester are you interested in starting?

- Summer Fall Spring

Why are you interested in interning for the Baker Institute Child Health Policy Program?

What inspires you about conducting research on the social determinants of health?

What do you hope to learn from an internship with the Baker Institute Child Health Policy Program?

Describe your prior research experience.

Be sure to include your familiarity with statistical methods and conducting survey research.

Please provide a writing sample in PDF format.

This sample may be a seminar, conference, or peer reviewed paper. Single authored papers are preferred.

Submit this completed application form and writing sample together by email to ck39@rice.edu.