By Jonathan Zimmerman

Kountze High School barred its cheerleaders from hanging banners at football games after being sued. A judge blocked the school’s ban.

Kountze Middle School cheerleaders display their faith-based signs at a recent football game.

By Kenneth M. Evans, Padraig Moloney and Kirstin R.W. Matthews

Outlook

HSPVA students work on their paintings skills. If voters approve, the school will move to a downtown campus.

First Amendment Students have a right to speak out

By Jonathan Zimmerman

Arts leaders back bonds

HSPVA from page B6

Arts leaders want a downtown campus for the school for the performing and visual arts and see it as an important addition to the Theater District, the cultural city and the greater Houston region.

We urge HISD residents to vote for the bond proposal Nov. 6 to give the school a home.

This article was submitted by Bill Arning, director, Contemporary Arts Museum Houston; Gregory Boyd, artistic director, Alley Theatre; Joni Green, executive director, Alley Theatre; Andrew Hunter, executive director, Houston Grand Opera; Gary Tinterow, director, Museum of Fine Arts, Houston; Stanton Welch, artistic director, Houston Ballet.

HSPVA students work on their paintings skills. If voters approve, the school will move to a downtown campus.

Kountze High School barred its cheerleaders from hanging banners at football games after being sued. A judge blocked the school's ban.